In 2017, there was exponential growth in the initial coin offering (ICO) market and meteoric rises in cryptocurrency values. In 2018, many regulators around the world cracked down on ICOs (through regulation and enforcement) and the prices of the most well known cryptocurrencies plummeted. As a result, those considering entering into this space in January 2019 face a very different landscape than they did one year ago. In the main, there has been a move away from utility tokens and towards tokenized securities. Join our experts for a discussion of how best to participate in the blockchain/ICO technological innovation in light of the latest global regulatory trends.
